30   Wet Forest

EVCGroupNo:	7 GroupName:	Wet or Damp Forests
EVCSubGroupNo:	7.1 SubGroupName:	Wet	☑ CCMA

EVCType: EVC

RegDescription: There are two forms of Wet Forest in the Otway Ranges (OR). The first is distributed along the Otway Range from the northern section of the Otway National Park and north of the Great Ocean Road to the Beech Forest Water Catchment. It has an extremely high annual rainfall or 1550mm and occurs in gullies or on protected south and south east-facing slopes of the Otway Range. In addition, it may extend out of more sheltered situations and on to ridges due to the protected nature of the topography and high rainfall and low cloud cover. Geology is mostly non-marine, early cretaceous sediments and soils are fertile loams, where slumping and erosion is common. The overstorey is a tall forest dominated by pure stands of Mountain Ash on wetter sites and mixed stands of Mountain Ash with Mountain Grey Gum and Messmate, the latter more frequent at lower altitudes. Blackwood forms a tall secondary tree layer. The shrub layer is well established and is dominated by mesic shrubs including Musk Daisy-bush, Prickly Currant-bush, Austral Mulberry and Blanket-leaf. Sclerophyllous, non-ericoid species, such as Bootlace Bush, Hazel Pomaderris, Banyalla, Satinwood and Privet Mock-olive are also common. There is an abundance and diversity of ferns in all strata as ground ferns, tree ferns or epiphytes. Epiphytic ferns, fern allies and filmy ferns include the vulnerable Beech Finger-fern, Kangaroo Fern, Common Finger-fern, Gypsy Fern, Austral Filmy Fern, Leathery Shield-fern. Ground ferns include Mother Shield-fern, Hard Water-fern and Bat's Wing Fern. Soft Tree-fern is nearly always present, with the rare Slender Tree-fern and Rough Tree-fern sometimes co-occurring. The ground stratum is usually sparse with a high cover of leaf litter. Common forbs include the vulnerable Tall Astelia, Forest Starwort, Tall Sword-sedge and Shade Nettle.

The second form of Wet Forest is more wide spread and is located in the northern section of Otway National Park both south and north of the Great Ocean Road. This form occurs on more exposed northerly slopes and ridges at lower altitudes, averaging 330m asl and average annual rainfall is 1450mm. Geology is of cretaceous sediments and soils are moderate to high in fertility and less moist than the previous form of this EVC. The overstorey is dominated by Mountain Ash over 40m tall. On drier sites this co-dominates with Messmate, Mountain Grey Gum and Victorian Blue Gum. Blackwood often forms a tall secondary tree layer. The understorey is more open and species-rich in shrubs than the previous form and includes Musk Daisy-bush, Snow Daisy-bush, Hazel Pomaderris, Prickly Currant-bush, Satinwood, Privet Mock-olive, Austral Mulberry and Victorian Christmas-bush. Ferns are neither common or abundant. Those that are present include Soft Tree-fern, Kangaroo Fern, Austral Bracken, Hard Water-fern, Bat's Wing Fern and Mother Shield-fern. Other species in the ground stratum are more common and include Forest Starwort, Hop Goodenia, Tall Sword-sedge and Mountain Clematis. Forest Wire-grass has a high cover and often dominates in response to disturbance.

CVU (outside CCMA region) The overstorey is a tall forest dominated by Mountain Ash in the Macedon area with Messmate and Manna Gum while Eurabbie dominates in the Mt Cole and Mt Buangor areas. Under this is a layer of understorey trees/tall shrubs including Blackwood, Silver Wattle, Austral Mulberry and Musk Daisy-bush. The ground is characteristically rich in ferns including Rough Tree-fern, Soft Tree-fern, Austral King-fern, Fishbone Water-fern, Hard Water-fern and often dense Mother Shield-fern. The non-vascular bryophytes (mosses and liverworts) are also an important component of the ground cover intersperced with forbs such as Forest Starwort, Prickly Starwort and the climber Mountain Clematis.
